hands outstretched with upraised palms. The solemn words were half uttered when he heard the clink and felt the descent of two Mr. Newsome showing visitor through his silver half-dollars which the groom had dropped into the hollow of his hand. "Amen!" said the minister in conclusion "Everything all right now, pa'son?" in quired the groom. Assured that it was, he threw his arms around the bride and began kissing her in the most exuberant fashion. "Parson," he said, "that's the best dollar's worth in the old Bay State."

> The man came in and said he wanted to see the city editor and that gentleman responded, says the Detroit Free Press "I heard something to-day," said the risitor, " that I think ought to be printed," " What is it?" queried the city editor. .

The Only Explanation.

" Well, to begin, it is perfectly inexplicable o me and if you can explain it I'll be obliged. "I'll have to hear it first," observed the city editor. "That's so: excuse me. It's this: A man told me only this afternoon that he had

Neighbor-What a nice big express wagon travelled on a Pullman car last night and this morning the porter refused to accept the customary quarter."
" Possibly he was high-toned and wanted a iroid he'll want me to haul something hair dollar, 'suggested the news man.
"No, that wasn't it. There was no gag about it. It was perfectly straight. He said he offered the porter a haif dollar, but that it " Papa," inquired the little boy, " how big was refused on the ground that he (the porter) was receiving fair pay from the Company; a hallst one did you ever see?"

"The seen haustones," replied Deacon from the seen haustones, as big as—as big—no! This is sunday! Read another page of yer catechism, samuel:"

ter) was receiving fair pay from the Company; that it was his business to be attentive to Mr. Pullman's patrons; that he considered it both a duty and a pleasure to be polite to all both a duty and a pleasure to see polite to all passengers who were on his car, and so on through a whole category of unexpected vir-Hunker-Hello, Blekells, when is your mar-brief rest, what do you think of that? lan't it worth publishing ?" "It certainly is," ventured the city editor thoughtfully.

" Can you explain it?" " Easily," asserted the city editor, with easy grace and protound confidence. The visitor's face was a perfect picture of increduitty.

"Come off," he said, bluntly. "But I can," protested the man at the desk. "The man who told it to you was a line."
